

Disputes

Disputes over the administration of Trusts, Wills and Estates are often premised on a breakdown in relationships (including family relationships).

The Court process is heavily relied upon to resolve these disputes, but too commonly this results in the depletion of Trust and Estate assets. Court also takes a toll (financially, emotionally, and time-wise) on participants, and is damaging for family and professional relationships.

Mediation is often a better pathway.

“They went well beyond the call of duty and it paid off, averting court proceedings.”

“I felt I was listened to.”
